

The Places He Didn't Go

E. Chandlee Bryan

On the second floor of the house he called his own
A portrait of Judge Joel Eastman stands watch
One hundred and thirty-seven years after his death
Joel stands beside a bathroom with a flushable toilet

A portrait of Judge Joel Eastman stands watch
His life was one of chamber pots and outhouses, yet today
Joel stands beside a bathroom with a flushable toilet
Oh, the places he didn't go

His life was one of chamber pots and outhouses, yet today
Joel lives beside a flushable toilet
Oh, the places he didn't go
The portrait of an abolitionist lawyer with a sometime temper still stands

Joel lives beside a flushable toilet
On the second floor of the house he called his own
The portrait of an abolitionist lawyer with a sometime temper still stands
One hundred and thirty-seven years after his death