

Appalachia

Volume 69
Number 1 Winter/Spring 2018: Mount Washington: Summit of Extremes

Article 24

2021

Ornithologist

Francis Lunney

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.dartmouth.edu/appalachia>

Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Lunney, Francis (2021) "Ornithologist," Appalachia: Vol. 69 : No. 1 , Article 24.
Available at: <https://digitalcommons.dartmouth.edu/appalachia/vol69/iss1/24>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by Dartmouth Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Appalachia by an authorized editor of Dartmouth Digital Commons. For more information, please contact dartmouthdigitalcommons@groups.dartmouth.edu.

Ornithologist

For Leo

What he sees, he mostly sees in dreams.
Red winged-blackbird, field rough with songbirds. He listens for the damp growing cold, the saw-whet calls to the black-capped chickadee.
On the table beside his lantern,
a pellet of the great horned owl:
matted fur and tiny bones.
Under night sky, he sleeps
as a mockingbird sleeps—his arms tucked like wings.

Francis Lunney

FRANCIS LUNNEY began writing poetry while a graduate student at the University of New Hampshire. His poems have appeared in the Owen Wister Review, Salamander, and Outside Bozeman magazine. He works as an elementary school reading specialist in Manchester-by-the-Sea, Massachusetts.