Whooping Cranes At Cedar Lake

Fewer than 180 whooping cranes remain in the world.

Three thousand miles from home a pair of whooping cranes rests on a pond. The whole country comes to see, talking of the miracle they ever found each other.

I tell them, "Love finds a way."

That night in a lonely dream
I unfold my white, long wings and fly over fields and towns in search of you.

John Smelcer

JOHN SMELCER is the last living member of the Ahtna tribe of Alaska who can read, write, and speak the tribe's severely endangered language. He is the author of 50 books, including his poetry book Indian Giver (Leapfrog, 2016).

"I started reading Appalachia for the accident reports, but I kept reading for the great features."—Mohamed Ellozy, subscriber
