

MIRABILIA

ART

Irma Vlasac

I find the beauty of art is held both in what the artist creates, and in the way the viewer breathes their own life into their understanding and perspective of a piece. What does a cuttlefish drawing courage to take on an unknown enemy, a starry night over a sandy landscape, and a bee stealing cotton candy have in common? They share the same limitless potential of life through imagination, in what you choose their story to be.
