Teal Pond

May 4

Dear Ones—We're walking the wood trail toward a cacophony of chorused trills and all around us the duff stirs and jumps with mottled brown bodies moving toward the sound of the males calling from the pond, leaping across our path toward the water—following we come upon the heaving revels of American toads, the day of the full moon mating in promiscuous piles in the cold brown water—males clasped around females mating and singing their blue balloon throats out and leaping in the fertile water on a day when the pull of warmth and sun and moon have told them to go forth and find each other and multiply, that toads not be lost to this world.
